

Thank you for purchasing this resource from resources4drama. We hope that you find it useful.

You are free to make any changes you wish to this resource unless you were made aware of special conditions before you purchased it. It is highly recommended that you keep a master copy before you make any changes. We will not be able to replace accidentally lost or "damaged" files; it would need to be repurchased.

If you have not already considered contributing some of your own resources to the site then please do so. Full terms and conditions are contained on the website (www.resources4drama.co.uk). Anything which would be of use to drama teachers will be considered, whether it is a short practical tip or a complete scheme of work. Resources in any digital format are acceptable – Word, PDF, PowerPoint, MP3 and so on. Remember - the author sets the price.

All of the resources contained on the website have been written by teachers. Although some have been specially created and are now available for the first time, many have been tried and tested over a period of time in real classrooms by real drama teachers.

You have purchased the right to use the resource at the institution where you work. You are not allowed to forward it to other people or use it anywhere else. Many of our resources contain electronic watermarks and are traceable to their original purchaser. We would, reluctantly, take action against anyone - individual or institution - who used our resources outside the Terms and Conditions.

Please check back regularly (we suggest weekly) for new additions to our catalogue. If there is a particular resource which you are looking for but cannot find them please contact us and we may be able to help you.
